

Sepulveda Elementary School Staff and Parent Surveys
Washoe County School District Parent Involvement Council
Evaluation Brief July 2008

Background

To learn more about how to strengthen partnerships between the district, individual schools, and parents, the Washoe County School District’s (WCSD) Parent Involvement Council (PIC) conducted a district-wide needs assessment. The PIC is comprised of parents, school district administrative, certified and classified employees, and business representatives. The needs assessment included three components: an online administrator survey, an online teacher and staff survey, and a parent survey administered through the mail. This evaluation brief will highlight the results from Sepulveda Elementary School’s staff and parent surveys. Throughout the brief, percentages reported are based on the number of respondents who answered the item, which may be less than the total number of survey respondents.

Staff Survey

- 9 respondents; 67% certified and 33% classified; 15% response rate.
- 100% felt their school was “good” or “excellent” at making parents feel welcome.
- 50% thought they would benefit from professional development specific to PI “a little” or “some.”
- 88% reported that in professional learning community meetings PI was talked about as a strategy for improving student academic achievement “frequently” or “very frequently.”
- 100% believed others at their school think PI was “important” or “extremely important.”
- 75% would place a “high priority” on increasing PI in their school.
- 75% thought PI made a “major contribution” to a child’s academic success.

Standards of Parent Involvement

School staff were asked to rate how well the school is doing with respect to the six well-established standards of parent involvement (PI). The items were combined to create a mean rating for each of the six standards. The response scale on these items were 1=poor, 2=fair, 3=good, and 4=excellent.

The bar graph to the right compares Sepulveda’s staff ratings to those of all WCSD elementary staff who completed the survey. Sepulveda’s mean ratings ranged from 3.0 to 3.6. The highest mean ratings were in the areas of student learning and communication, while the lowest was related to school decision making.

6 Standards of Parent Involvement

Communication	Communication between home and school is regular, two-way and meaningful.

Student Learning at Home	Parents play an integral role in assisting student learning.

School Decision Making	Parents are full partners in the decisions that affect children and families.
Collaborating with the Community	Community resources are used to strengthen schools, families and student learning.

The survey was mailed to 699 Sepulveda Elementary School parents, and 186 were returned, yielding a response rate of 27%. The top three ways that parents got most of their information about school were from their child's folder (46%), flyers from school (13%), and newsletters from the school (10%).

- Non-white parents were more likely than white parents to agree that "employees in the front office are polite to me when I am at this school;" "school employees are polite to me when I call the school;" "my child's school sees parents as important partners;" and, "this school will help me assist my child with homework and learning."

Conclusions and Recommendations

Communication seems to be the strongest area of parent involvement at Sepulveda Elementary School. School staff respondents rated communication as a top area of parent involvement in their school. Parent results were similar with high levels of agreement on several communication-related items. Results from both the school staff and parent surveys suggest that school decision making, volunteering, and student learning at home are areas in which Sepulveda Elementary School could strengthen parent involvement.

As parent involvement is a viable and necessary strategy for student achievement, a general recommendation is to reallocate school site funding to support systemic implementation of parent involvement. Another recommendation is to provide all school staff with appropriate professional development on how to effectively engage parents in their children's education. Schools also should help parents understand academic standards, state and district assessments, how to monitor a child's progress and work with educators to improve the achievement of their children. A variety of strategies to improve parent involvement are highlighted below.

Strategies to Improve Parent Involvement

General

- Reallocate school site funding to support systemic implementation of parent involvement. Example: Pay teachers overtime for working with parents at school wide meetings from the school general fund budget.
- Provide appropriate professional development to all school staff on how to effectively engage parents in their children's education. Example, customer service training for education support professionals; training for teachers in how to reach out to, communicate with, and work with parents as equal partners.

Student Learning at Home

- Provide information and ideas to the family to increase family participation in setting student goals each year and in planning for college or work.
- Provide information for families on skills required for students in all subjects at each grade.

School Decision Making

- Create networks to link all families with parent representatives.

Volunteering

- Create a parent room or family center for volunteer work, meetings, and resources for families.
- Send out an annual postcard survey to identify all available talents, times, and locations of volunteers.
